

Contents

Preface	v
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
1. Trade union associations: Current issues	5
The reasons for stagnation	8
Economic changes	8
The new constraints on macroeconomic policies:
Impact on trade unions	9
Trade competition and the unions	15
Changing mentalities	18
Attitudes of other parties to industrial relations	19
Shortcomings of some union structures	22
The unions' objectives: Theory and practice	23
2. Trade unions in the throes of change	31
New services	31
New members	32
New frontiers: Transnational trade union activities	37
The rocky road to international trade union cooperation	37
What transnational trade union cooperation has to offer	39
New alliances?	44
The example of the public sector	44
The labour movement and politics	46
Unusual partnerships	47
Initial conclusions	51
3. Employers' organizations	57
4. The new features of production and industrial relations	69
Opening national borders: What effects for industrial relations?	69
Interdependence and autonomy of national policies	69
Capital mobility and state immobility	70
Capital mobility and labour immobility	74
A certain degree of labour market regulation promotes economic openness	77
Enterprise competitiveness and industrial relations	82
Is the autonomy of the enterprise rising or declining?	82
New interfirm dependencies and integration within the multinational enterprise	84

The nature of new interfirm dependencies	85
Integration within the multinational enterprise	89
The enterprise and collective labour relations	93
The principal features of human resource management policies	95
The advantages and disadvantages for industrial relations	97
5. The instruments of social dialogue in the industrialized countries	107
Introduction	107
Industrial relations in countries with decentralized bargaining systems	110
Social protection in the voluntarist system of industrial relations	110
The voluntarist system and the decline in collective bargaining coverage	111
Decentralization or decline of collective bargaining?	113
Changes in the content of collective bargaining	114
Collective bargaining and social integration	116
Industrial relations in countries with coordinated bargaining systems	118
Experimenting with enterprise bargaining	119
Centralized bargaining	125
The endurance of centralized bargaining	125
The complexity of centralized bargaining	127
The case of Japan	133
Comments on the public sector	135
Towards a diversification of the levels of social dialogue	137
Conclusions	142
6. The instruments of social dialogue in the countries of Central and Eastern Europe	145
Collective bargaining at enterprise level: Real but uneven progress	146
Results and problems of national agreements	150
7. The instruments of social dialogue in the newly industrialized and developing countries	157
Industrial relations in Latin America	157
Uneven spread of enterprise-level bargaining	158
The influence of the legislative system and the experience of tripartism	161
Industrial relations in Asia	164
Moving towards collective bargaining?	165
Difficulties of social dialogue at the national level	168
Industrial relations in Africa	170
A collective bargaining system in need of rebuilding	170
Tripartism and structural adjustment	171
Conclusions	173
8. Industrial relations and the informal sector	175
Introduction	175
Are industrial relations relevant to the informal sector?	177

Clarifying the concept	177
Magnitude, trends and patterns of growth	178
Constraints in organizing	180
Heterogeneity of activities and employment status	180
Small-scale activities and instability	183
Informality/illegality and its cost	184
Informal workers' needs and socio-economic concerns	186
Enhancement of income and working condition	186
Improvement of productivity	189
Problems specific to informal sector workers	192
Informal workers' organizations: Characteristics, constraints and prospects	193
Workers' rights and weak organizational capacity	194
Informal workers' associations: Characteristics and constraints	195
Grounds for organizing	196
Scope of informal workers' associations	197
Factors of instability	198
Types of associations and role of industrial relations organizations	200
Strategies	202
The role of trade unions	202
Organizing informal workers as trade union members	204
Capacity-building and alliance forging	205
The role of employers' organizations and the importance of alliance building	206
Dialogue and negotiation	209
Prospects	212
Concluding remarks	215
9. The present as a signpost to the future	221
New social dynamics?	221
A broader geographic context	230
Statistical annex	233
Industrial relations indicators	235
Table 1.1. Trade union membership	235
Table 1.2. Trade union density	237
Table 1.3. Change in trade union density	239
Table 2. Profile of national employers' organizations	241
Table 3.1. Collective bargaining structure in selected countries	246
Table 3.2. Collective bargaining coverage rates in selected countries	248
Table 4.1. Number of strikes and lockouts	249
Table 4.2. Workers involved in strikes and lockouts	251
Table 4.3. Workdays not worked as a result of strikes and lockouts	253
Table 5. Ratification of ILO Conventions on freedom of association and industrial relations	255
Socio-economic indicators	258
Table 6. Gross domestic product, population and poverty	258
Table 7. Labour force structure and trends	262
Table 8. Employment and unemployment	266
Technical notes	269