

CONTENTS

Foreword.	v
1. The struggle against unemployment: Medium-term policy options for transition economies, by Martin Godfrey and Peter Richards	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 The economic context	2
1.3 Underutilization – to hide or to reveal?	4
1.4 What kind of unemployment benefit system?	9
1.5 What role for active labour market programmes?	10
1.6 Conclusions	16
2. Employment policies and programmes in Bulgaria, by Daniela Bobeva	19
2.1 Introduction	19
2.2 Economic reforms and the labour market	20
2.3 Labour market development	25
2.4 Evolution of labour market policy	29
2.5 Institutional framework of employment policy	31
2.6 The unemployment benefit system.	32
2.7 Employment services.	35
2.8 Labour market programmes	36
2.9 Financing employment and unemployment policies	43
2.10 Conclusions	44
3. Employment policies and programmes in the Czech Republic, by Alena Nešporová and Vera Uldrichova	47
3.1 Introduction	47
3.2 Macroeconomic developments	48
3.3 Labour market developments	50
3.4 Employment policy and its legal and institutional framework	60
3.5 Labour market policies	62
3.6 Evaluation of labour market policies	68
3.7 Financing of labour market policies	70
3.8 Conclusions	71

Employment policies and programmes in Central and Eastern Europe

4. Employment policies and programmes in Hungary, by Mária Frey	77
4.1 Introduction	77
4.2 Employment policy objectives after the change in the political system.	78
4.3 Labour market developments	80
4.4 The organization and administration of labour market policy: The public employment service	89
4.5 Unemployment compensation	95
4.6 Active labour market programmes and eligibility conditions.	101
4.7 Conclusions	110
5. Employment policies and programmes in Poland, by Marek Góra	115
5.1 Introduction	115
5.2 The labour market in Poland: Basic facts	116
5.3 Recent macroeconomic developments	122
5.4 The public employment service (PES)	124
5.5 Active labour market programmes	127
5.6 Conclusions	132
6. Unemployment and unemployment policy in Romania, by Cătălin Zamfir	135
6.1 Initial conditions: Romania before 1989	135
6.2 The reform process: Romania after 1989	136
6.3 Labour market developments	138
6.4 Conclusions and outlook	144
7. Employment policies and programmes in Slovakia, by Paul Ochotnický	147
7.1 Introduction	147
7.2 The role of employment policy	147
7.3 Policy coordination and the wage negotiation system	150
7.4 The Government's role in the labour market.	152
7.5 Labour market programmes and policy	153
7.6 Financing of labour market administration and policy	154
8. Employment policies and programmes in Slovenia, by Sonja Drobnič	157
8.1 Introduction	157
8.2 Employment and unemployment in the transition period	159
8.3 The institutional framework	165
8.4 Passive and active labour market programmes	168

Contents

8.5 Expenditure on labour market programmes	174
8.6 Conclusions: From unemployment to employment policy	177
9. Employment policies and programmes in Ukraine, by Volodimir Yatsenko	183
9.1 Economic development of Ukraine, 1991-94	183
9.2 Population, employment and the labour market	187
9.3 Incomes policy and labour supply	196
9.4 Employment policy	199
9.5 Conclusions	204
Index	207

Tables

1.1 Exports to former member countries of CMEA as a proportion of total exports, Central and Eastern Europe, 1986-91	2
1.2 Percentage change in real GDP over year earlier, selected transition economies, 1989-95	3
1.3 Registered unemployment rates, selected transition economies, 1989-94	5
1.4 Percentage changes in GDP, wage employment and real consumer wages, selected transition economies, 1989-92 and 1992-94	5
1.5 Labour force participation rates, selected countries and years	8
1.6 Expenditure on passive and active employment measures.	11
1.7 Ratios of registered unemployed and of benefit claimants to public employment service staff, early 1990s	15
2.1 Population by educational level, 1985 and 1992	27
2.2 Unemployment trends, 1991-94	29
2.3 Labour market programmes, 1991 and 1992	43
3.1 Basic macroeconomic indicators, 1990-94	49
3.2 Working-age population, labour force and participation rates 1980-93	50
3.3 Employment structure, 1970-93	51
3.4 Educational structure of the economically active population, 1991	53
3.5 Occupational structure of the economically active population by age, 1991	54
3.6 Registered unemployment and its structure, 1990-94.	55
3.7 Unemployment rates by sex, 1990-94.	55
3.8 Educational structure of registered job applicants, 1991-94	56
3.9 Unemployment rates by sex and education, 1993 and 1994	56