

Contents

Preface	v
General introduction	1
Part I
1. A state of upheaval	9
1.1 Some major developments	9
1.1.1 Economic and technological developments	10
1.1.2 Globalization	15
1.1.3 Political changes	21
1.1.4 Towards a single model?	23
1.2 New operating conditions for public administration	25
1.2.1 A new framework	25
1.2.2 New actors and new needs	33
1.2.3 New officials	39
1.3 New challenges for labour administration	40
1.3.1 Being an actor in national development	42
1.3.2 Tackling obstacles to development	48
1.3.3 A universally accepted conceptual framework	55
2. Trends in modernization	63
2.1 Historical background	63
2.1.1 The importance of historical context	63
2.1.2 Typical situations	65
2.1.3 Types of normative practices observed	66
2.1.4 Current trends: Deregulation differentiated according to its aim	67
2.2 Changes in the institutional framework	68
2.2.1 The institution and organization of labour administration functions	68
2.2.2 Typical situations	69
2.2.3 Practices: Different types of structures	73
2.2.4 Current trends: Independent bodies and development of networks	75
2.3 Policy implementation	76
2.3.1 The role of the actors	76
2.3.2 Typical situations	78
2.3.3 Methods: From a logic of compulsion to a logic of encouragement	80
2.3.4 Current trends: Changing the function of labour administration	81

2.4	Active human resources management	85
2.4.1	The bureaucratic model	85
2.4.2	Typical situations	86
2.4.3	Practices: Expansion of the bureaucratic model	88
2.4.4	Current trends: Going beyond the bureaucratic model	91
2.5	The contribution made by information technology	93
2.5.1	The role of technology	93
2.5.2	Typical situations	94
2.5.3	Practices: Technologies and efficiency of activities	96
2.5.4	Current trends: Technological progress	97
2.6	Partnership	98
2.6.1	Current status and definition of partnership	98
2.6.2	Typical situations	100
2.6.3	Practices: Several forms of partnership	102
2.6.4	Current trends: A notable increase in partnerships	103
2.7	Methods of funding	105
2.7.1	A variety of principles	105
2.7.2	Typical situations	105
2.7.3	Practices: An even greater variety of methods	107
2.7.4	Current trends: Diversification of funding sources	108
2.8	Evaluation: A growing concern	109
2.8.1	The multiple dimensions of evaluation	109
2.8.2	Typical situations	110
2.8.3	Practices: Four major categories	113
2.8.4	Current trends: Towards systematic evaluation	115
2.9	What conclusions can be drawn from the trends described?	117
3.	Making improvements	121
3.1	The parameters of change	121
3.1.1	Introducing change	121
3.2	From the search for effectiveness to quality management	129
3.3	Assessment in the labour administration system	133
3.3.1	What is an assessment?	136
3.3.2	Initiating an assessment process	140
3.3.3	Carrying out the assessment	143
3.3.4	Intermediary presentations	147
3.3.5	Final presentation	147
3.4	Assessment report and recommendations	149
3.5	Assessment follow-up	151
	Conclusion	153
	Annexes: Organizational charts of the national labour administration system	157
	List of tables
1.1	Workforce distribution by region and sector, 1980-97	11
1.2	Public expenditure as a proportion of GDP	29
	List of boxes
3.1	Terms of reference	144
3.2	What is the team looking for?	148
3.3	Assessment report plan	150

CONTENTS

Part II

Twenty-seven (27) case studies analysing labour administration practices in the fields of labour, employment and vocational training, industrial relations, and evaluation

Introduction	163
Labour
The informal sector
Programme for the Promotion of Self-employment and Micro-enterprises (PRODAME): The case of Peru	167
Social security/informal sector: The case of Senegal	171
Occupational safety and health
Occupational safety and health: The case of Fiji	177
Development and implementation strategies for the national occupational safety and health policy: The case of Japan	189
Occupational safety and health (the WISE Programme): The case of the Philippines	200
Self-regulation by firms of occupational safety and health: The case of Norway	208
Wage guarantees
Wage guarantees in the case of business insolvency: The case of Spain ..	213
Clandestine labour
The campaign against clandestine labour: The case of Argentina	219
Employment, vocational training
Information for users
The Information Centre: The case of China	227
Information and forecast systems on the labour market
An occupation-based statistical system for employment projections: The case of the United States	233
Information and vocational guidance for jobseekers
Direct access to information for employment service users: The case of the United States	241
Information on job opportunities and vocational training for jobseekers: The case of Germany	250
Placement
Placement of the unemployed: The case of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of China	255
Skills assessment
Skills assessment: The case of France	267
Retraining of workers
Retraining of workers: The case of China	273
The early warning system: The case of Austria	279
Development of training
Contract policy for development in the field of vocational training: Training Development Agreements (EDDF) and Contracts for Prospective Studies (CEP): The case of France	287
Structuring informal labour
Labour administration and the informal sector: The importance of the Informal Sector Support Fund (FASI): The case of Burkina Faso	293
Employment and business creation
Promoting entrepreneurship: The case of Poland	299
Employment in small and medium-sized enterprises
Promoting employment in small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs): The case of Japan	307

NEW FORMS OF LABOUR ADMINISTRATION

Industrial relations

Collective disputes

Conciliation of collective labour disputes: The case of Belgium 315

Individual disputes

Settlement of individual labour disputes: The case of Chile 321

Collective bargaining

Labour administration activity: The organization of collective bargaining:
The case of Hungary 329

Countries emerging from armed conflict

The role of labour administration in countries emerging from armed conflict: The case of Mozambique 337

Evaluation

Evaluating the work of labour administration and its components

Performance evaluation in labour administration: The case of the Province of Quebec (Canada) 345

Organization of internal evaluation: The General Inspectorate of Social Affairs (IGAS): The case of France 355

Evaluation in labour administration: The case of the United Kingdom . . . 360